JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4628), to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment that is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

THE NATION'S INTELLIGENCE CAPABILITIES—A NEW PERSPECTIVE

The conferees note that, in the wake of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, the fiscal year 2003 budget submitted by the President includes the most substantial increase for programs funded in the National Foreign Intelligence Program in history. This authorization bill supports that investment by focusing on authorizations that enhance programs and information sharing across the various Intelligence Community (IC) agencies. Further, the President's funding increase appears to respond to congressional exhortations to develop a long-term funding program to correct serious IC deficiencies that have developed over the past decade. The conferees recognize that these deficiencies existed prior to September 11 and, indeed, the intelligence committees have been consistently highlighting these shortfalls for the past eight years. Put simply, although the end of the Cold War warranted a reordering of national priorities, the steady decline in intelligence funding since the mid-1990s left the nation with a diminished ability to address emerging threats—such as global terrorism—and the technical challenges of the 21st Century. Further, the IC's lack of a corporate approach to addressing enduring intelligence problems helped to create a culture that hindered data collection (especially human intelligence collection), data sharing, and collaborative analysis.

In this budget, the conferees seek to highlight four priority areas that must receive significant, sustained attention beginning immediately if intelligence is to fulfill its role in our national security strategy. Those are: (1) improving information sharing and all-source analysis; (2) improving IC professional training with a major emphasis on developing language skills; (3) ensuring national imagery collection program viability and effectiveness; and (4) correcting enduring systemic problems, deficiencies in human intelligence, and rebuilding a robust research and development program.

The conferees' top priority last year was the revitalization of the NSA. Although this continues to be one of the conferees' priority concerns, the focus this year must be on information sharing and cross-community analysis. The conferees note that the individual intelligence agencies and, moreover, their extremely talented and dedicated people, labor continuously to provide the absolute best intelligence products possible in defense of the nation. These efforts are, however, generally conducted in isolation from one another, and, most disturbingly, existing rules and procedures often restrict information from the community's depth and breadth of analytic talent. Therefore, those individual efforts can usually only piece together fragments of the overall intelligence puzzle. What is critical in the post-9/11 era is having a community that is, to the maximum extent possible, devoid of information sharing restrictions and one that fosters a greater culture focused on collaborative analysis. The conferees have included detailed language on the need for the IC to breakdown information sharing barriers and the need to cease the practice of allowing agencies to routinely restrict "their data" from other agencies, including law enforcement.

In order to maximize the IC's analytic effectiveness and output further, we must ensure that the dedicated professionals of the IC are properly trained and provided the skills necessary for the tasks that are required to fight the global war on terrorism and other emerging threats. For a number of years, the House and Senate Intelligence Committees, separately and jointly, have stated specific concerns about the dearth of language skills throughout the IC. The lack of depth in the so-called 'low density' languages was acutely experienced during operations in Afghanistan. The conferees believe this is unacceptable and have put a great deal of emphasis in training efforts, particularly on foreign language training.

With respect to the nation's imagery architecture, the conferees are very concerned about the viability and effectiveness of a future overhead architecture, given the apparent lack of a comprehensive architectural plan for the overhead system of systems, specifically in the area of imagery. For example, the conferees believe the administration is facing a major challenge in addressing technical and funding problems with the Future Imagery Architecture (FIA) program that could force untenable trades between critical future capabilities and legacy systems. In this conference report, the conferees have addressed the known FIA problems as well as the need to develop imagery alternatives if developmental problems exist or persist. The conferees note, however, a continuing pattern by which many individual programs have been justified and provided resources with little or no regard to the entire set of IC collection capabilities, including space-based and airborne. The conferees believe that, although individual systems may have specific merit, the real measure of merit is in what the overall collective mix brings to bear against the range of threats to U.S. national security. Moreover, the ability to fund all legacy, developmental, and desired systems has a finite limit. Therefore, there is a critical need to review each program in the context of the others, so that viable trades can be made based on substance, and long-term funding of healthy programs can be provided.

Finally, the conferees have focused their attention for a number of years on a number of enduring IC challenges. Once again, the Conferees have addressed in this bill such issues as the need to improve NSA acquisition efforts, the need to improve the depth and breadth of HUMINT, and improving research and development (R&D). With respect to the NSA, the conferees are pleased with the Director's attempts to baseline current capabilities so that future needs can be properly identified and resulting acquisition decisions made. The conferees have provided incentives to complete these later two efforts. In terms of improving HUMINT, the conferees have focused on improving training, providing technical resources to operations, and properly funding analytic efforts. All of these capabilities are supported by R&D efforts. Therefore, the conferees have supported the administration's increases to agencies' basic R&D programs. The conferees note that this funding support is based on the perspective that the IC must continue to renew itself of the ever-changing world. The new perspective on national security is that intelligence is the first line of defense against an illusive and unstructured threat that uses asymmetric means to harm America. It is from that perspective that the conferees have made the decision contained herein.

TITLE I—INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

Sec. 101. Authorization of appropriations

Section 101 of the conference report lists the departments, agencies, and other elements of the United States Government for whose intelligence and intelligence-related activities the Act authorizes appropriations for fiscal year 2003.

Sec. 102. Classified schedule of authorizations

Section 102 of the conference report makes clear that the details of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for intelligence and intelligence-related activities and applicable personnel ceilings covered under this title for fiscal year 2003 are contained in a classified Schedule of Authorizations. The classified Schedule of Authorizations is incorporated into the Act by this section. The Schedule of Authorizations shall be made available to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives and to the President. The classified annex provides details of the Schedule. Section 102 is identical to section 102 of the House bill.

Sec. 103. Personnel ceiling adjustments

Section 103 of the conference report authorizes the Director of Central Intelligence, with the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in fiscal year 2003 to authorize employment of civilian personnel in excess of the personnel ceilings applicable to the components of the Intelligence Community under section 102 by an amount not to exceed two percent of the total of the ceilings applicable under section 102. The Director of Central Intelligence may exercise this authority only if necessary to the performance of important intelligence functions. Any exercise of this authority must be reported to the intelligence committees of the Congress.

The managers emphasize that the authority conferred by section 103 is not intended to permit wholesale increase in personnel strength in any intelligence component. Rather, the section provides the Director of Central Intelligence with flexibility to adjust personnel levels temporarily for contingencies and for overages caused by an imbalance between hiring new employees and attrition of current employees. The managers do not expect the Director of Central Intelligence to allow heads of intelligence components to plan to exceed levels set in the Schedule of Authorizations except for the satisfaction of clearly identified hiring needs that are consistent with the authorization of personnel strengths in this bill. In no case is this authority to be used to provide for positions denied by this bill. Section 103 is identical to section 103 of the House bill and section 103 of the Senate amendment.

Sec. 104. Intelligence Community Management Account

Section 104 of the conference report authorizes appropriations for the Intelligence Community Management Account (CMA) of the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) and sets the personnel end-strength for the Intelligence Community management staff for fiscal year 2003.

Subsection (a) authorizes appropriations of $158,254,000 for fiscal year 2003 for the activities of the CMA of the DCI.

Subsection (b) authorizes 322 full-time personnel for the Intelligence Community Management Staff for fiscal year 2003 and provides that such personnel may be permanent employees of the Staff or detailed from various elements of the United States Government.

Subsection (c) authorizes additional appropriations and personnel for the CMA as specified in the classified Schedule of Authorizations and permits these additional amounts to remain available through September 30, 2004.

Subsection (d) requires that, except as provided in Section 113 of the National Security Act of 1947, personnel from another element of the United States Government be detailed to an element of the CMA on a reimbursable basis, or for temporary situations of less than one year on a non-reimbursable basis.

Subsection (e) authorizes $34,100,000 of the amount authorized in subsection (a) to be made available for the National Drug Intelligence Center (NDIC). Subsection (e) requires the DCI to transfer these funds to the Department of Justice to be used for NDIC activities under the authority of the Attorney General and subject to section 103(d)(1) of the National Security Act. Subsection (e) is similar to subsection (e) of the House bill.
